L-Blend Nonsense Words:

How to Use the Cards

2 / 2

For the grown-up. One minute a round, after your child knows the basic letter sounds.

Before you start

Cut out the cards and shuffle them. Show your child the made-up mark and tell them those words are not real: they are the names of tiny aliens, and the only way to read an alien's name is to sound it out.

Three steps for every card

1. Isolate the sounds. Your child points under each letter and says its sound aloud: /s/ /i/ /g/ (two letters such as sh or ck make one sound).
2. Blend them together. Your child slides the sounds smoothly into one word: sig.
3. Move on. Next card. If your child gets stuck, say the sounds with them, blend it together once, and go to the next card.

One minute, then repeat

- Set a timer for one minute and go through as many cards as you can. Stop when it rings, even mid-deck.
- Repeat the same deck on another day. The goal is comfort with saying sounds and blending them, so smooth beats fast.
- Watch for memorizing. The made-up words are there to make your child think and sound them out. If your child reads a made-up card instantly from memory, switch to a different deck, or mix two decks together.
- Help, then move on. A stuck card is a card to come back to tomorrow, not one to finish now.
- Stop using made-up words once your child reads real words with this sound easily. These cards are not practice for a school reading test.
